

I believe cellular phone numbers should remain with the customer if they so choose. To require phone number changes when switching phone companies adds inconvenience and costs to the customers. The better alternative is for the phone companies to resolve this problem even if the "reasonable" costs must be passed onto the customers. This will encourage the phone companies to truly compete for our business. It also will allow the customer to select the best provider based on their own individual needs and the quality of service being provided.
